Now Calvin is a splendid man,

Esteem him very highly: And yet I wondered very much What Le could want with Miley.

I have not saw them," I replied;

Scarching for Corry Minner."

I saw him, Chat, not long ago-

Ten minutes, I suppose— Had ordered him a nice new suit-

He'd just come out from Fohs'.

Then Calvin went on up the street,

And I began once more To read my letter, and commenced Where I'd left off before.

Soon Oille James came up with me-

He's got a fine digestion— Well, Chat, 'said he, 'how do you Stand on the money question?

And be a Pemocrat!"

Your views are very good," said I, "And I agree with you: Our standard money should consist Of gold and silver too."

My stock of grace was well-nigh gone.
I felt that I would burst!
I'd lost the place place where I left off.
So turned back to the first.

Charles Evans then came walking up.

"Fine day, Chat, nice and cool

Chat, why not start to school?"

I have no time to go to school."

I answered him; "although My fund of knowledge is not great, I'm rather old, you know."

First educate yourself," he said:

Will find it oftentimes the best To marry later on."

Young men like you and John

You're right professor." I replied "Tis best that one should tarry; Why fly to ills we know not of ?"

Why should one want to marry?"

CHAPTER IX. JOHN AND ANNIE.

When Johnny Dee had finished 'up' His story of their ride
Through Panther Hollow, Annie said,
Still sitting by his side:

If I had been in Laura's place. It some how seems to me, I'd put a veto on them both— And you too, Johnny Dee."

I can't see why you'd blame the boys Or why you'd veto me; or all is fair in love, you know," Responded Johnny Dec.

But be that as it may," he said 'Let us not talk of that; et's talk of snakes, or politics-Are you a Democrat?

Should think I was." Annie return'd "I'll never have a man Who is, or was, or even looks Like a Republican."

Indeed, you're quite discouraging; Spose I will have to shove— And die, too of a broken heart—

There's one thing certain," John wen "Pil always be a man; And sink or swim, I li live and die

A good Republican. Yet I'm not prejudiced at all -Was never in my life;
And I would not object to have
A Democratic wife!"

Ere Annie could reply to this, Chat rode up on his mule, Entered the parlor unannounce d-He does this, as a rule.

"Hello, big Sis -taking a rest! And hello, Johnny Dee! I took a mule ride out to town— And you're still here, I see?" Yes, I'm still here, and doing well,"

"Well whoop 'om up, Chat," he replied You'd just as well begin: The cry 'sound money's' all a fraud— Free siliver's bound to win Johany returned, "although was preparing soon to make The good old dollar of our dad's Some overtures to go. Is 'gound' enough for me; Worth anywhere a hundred cents-You can't go yet, John." Chat replied: Must stay and have some dinner; The same as gold, you see.

For we're to have a regular feast— Expecting Corry Minner." Did you bring me a letter, Chat?

A paper or a magazine— Just anything to read? Was nothing for you, Sis," he said; Just one for only me:

And it is newsy, let me say— Postmark'd at Mound, you see. You don't know that chirography-I'll bet my male on that. Don't you wish you could do that way

You can't tho,' Sis" said Chat, Annie could not reply to this; For in came Corry Minner:

The mid-day meal was then anno And all went in to dinner. They went in to the dinning room, n they d all sat down, That told them of the happenings That morning in the town.

CHAPTER X.

CHAT IN TOWN.

Twas soon this morning, as you know. Long ere the hour for dinner-caught my mule and rode to town, To meet with Corry Minner. or Corry had addressed to me A little note, which said or me to meet him on that day.

Old Boy: You'd better come to town Or you'll be very sorry; something takes place on Wednesday

Can't be postpon'd. Yours, Corry. And so I went, as I've just said,

And there I chanced to meet— With his accustom'd cheerfulness— Judge Hearin on the street. "How are you, Chat?" the Judge spok

"You'd better call around: A letter came for you last night, Postmarked, I think, at Mound."

I thanked the Judge, and then went Round to the office door, Where every body goes for mail Twice every day, or more. Hello Chat-when did you get in?

Come right on up," said Tom; A letter here for you, my boy-I looked at and found

Judge Hearin's words were enough— 'Twas postmarked at Mound

Now you may bet that I was glad! Gee—how it made me feel! on see that I was in suspense-I scarce could break the seal!

I think his mule would bring A little better price than yours-Fom Hargraves stood outside the doc Said he, "Chat, what's the news? Will be twelve in the spring? I have a splendid three-year-old, Say, don't you want your hair cut off, A shine put on your shoes!"

Something your wife can ride; For, if all rumors are correct, You're soon to have a bride." "No, not to-day," I answered him, "Twill soon be time for dinner; "I would not bet on it." I said: I've got to knock around awhile-I'm hunting Corry Minner." "I'll hardly come out winner. The one who'll be a benedict, I think, is Corry Minner."

Was here some time ago," said Tom: "He came this morning soon, He took a hair-cut, bath and shave. You think he'll marry, do you, Chat? By George, but that is news: thought, by George, something Shine, and a good shampoon. He'd got some fine new shoes."

"And just between us. Chat," said Tom 'May put me down a sinner, If there is not a wedding soon Of some dear girl and Minner."

"You think so, Tom?" I answered him "I can't exactly say— Judging from his maneuvering, It looks somewhat that way.

f stepp'd a little to one side.
I though? I'd then proceed
To read my letter undisturb'd—
For it I sure must read.

looked first at the signature-Though I felt sure of that-Then commenc'd at the very first Got where it said, "Dear Chat."

Squire Morgan came out of his shop, Into the open air, Refilled his pipe and, lighting it, Sat down upon a chair.

By grabs," he said as he sat down "Strange how some men will do "Il vote, by grabs, to put it down! How are they, Chat, with you?"

"Divided, 'Squire," I answered him, "Split up somewhat, but then Fent, Corry, Johnny, Fate and Dave Are local option men."
